

Deborah A. Jones

The youngest of three children, I grew up in Omaha, Nebraska and couldn't wait to see the world. I traveled to Europe after high school and settled in Atlanta, Georgia after living in several cities throughout the Midwest. Family, friends, hobbies and travel enrich my life.

My career in accounting started at a young age when I worked part-time as a bookkeeper while going to college. Accounting has since given me the flexibility to work and raise a family and I have enjoyed working for companies ranging in size from sole proprietorships to multi-divisional corporations. Over the past 20 years here in Atlanta, I have been an accountant and office manager for a mobile medical service, a drug testing company, a multi-store fast food franchisee, and a software development company. I also served as the accounting manager for a multi-state property management company under contract with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Duties in this office included accounting for over 3,000 residential properties in Georgia.

After 30 years of working for others with a proven track record, I started my own firm offering accounting and personal financial assistance to a select client base. My mission statement is to provide excellent client service utilizing my experience, skills, resources and integrity as a trained professional. Client services include monthly accounting and financial duties emphasizing cash management, organization, and comprehensive reporting. I am a QuickBooks Pro Advisor and a member of the American Institute of Professional Bookkeepers and the American Association of Daily Money Managers. I am also proficient with numerous financial software applications.

My husband and I live in the Atlanta area and have four grown children, two grandsons, and two cats.
